Re: Chandler, et al. v. Jacobs Engineering Group, Inc., et al., No. 3:12-CV-00104-BRW

Dear Counsel:

I have always understood that an “errata sheet” is to be used to correct court reporter errors, not to add substantive matters; but I have never researched the phrase.

It appears to me that the changes made by the deponent, Mr. Smith, are substantive changes, or additions, which go beyond the purpose of an errata sheet.

Mr. Day, would you please disabuse me if my understanding of the phrase is in error. In other words, I’m asking you to do the research so that I won’t have to do it.

Please correct me, if I need to be corrected, by 4:00 p.m. next Tuesday, September 10, 2013 -- otherwise, I’m going to rule agin (sic) you.

Cordially,

/s/ Billy R. Wilson
